The term NEET group is an acronym for "Not in Education, Employment or Training". In other words, people will be NEET if they are still unemployed, unmarried, not enrolled in school or technical training needed for work. The classification of NEETs varies with cultures or nations. In the United Kingdom, the NEET group is specifically referred to people aged between 16 and 24 (some 16 year olds are still of compulsory school age). In Japan, wider ranges are spared for those aged between 15 and 34 seeking jobs, temporarily quitting their compulsory education, or remaining disengaged. In the recent years, the NEET group targets the adult children who are less desired to seek jobs but financially rely on the full support of their parents. To encounter the growing problem, a proposal was submitted to remove young NEETs from the social welfare list so that they are obligated to take on the jobs. Currently, the NEET group has gone beyond a family problem and becomes an urgent social issue. In order to curb the growing tendency, the ministry of education advises that more motivational and vocational education should be given to young people. Social groups should also join the campaign to help NEET group members out of their joblessness. Meanwhile, parents are also accountable for developing more career-driven youngsters and then growing a greater sense of responsibility.
